Baldwin County Regional Airport Teaches Students About The Field of Aviation

The Baldwin County Regional Airport (BCRA) plays a pivotal role in teaching the youth of Baldwin County all about aviation. The airport hosts around five or six groups of students from K - 12th grade each year, ranging in size from 20-90 students.

Field trips to the Baldwin County Airport immerse the students into a day in the life of BCRA. Airport staff takes the students on a tour of the airport and allow them to get an up-close look at various airplanes. They even have the chance to sit inside one of the airport's training planes when available. Students hear all about how the airport operates, including its role in aircraft arriving and departing Milledgeville, fueling, and handling of the aircraft. The students learn how the BCRA serves the community as being a fuel stop for medical, military, and law enforcement helicopters as well. BCRA staff also educates students about the jobs available in the aviation industry and gives them an overview of how to become a pilot. They explain that the FAA is a huge governmental organization which offers hundreds of different job opportunities and careers.

It is a true pleasure for the Baldwin County Regional Airport to share about the importance of the airport and its impact on the community and surrounding counties with the next generation.
