Station 7 Fire Truck Installs New Foam System

There is a new inline foam education system on the fire truck at Baldwin County Station 7. This new addition to the truck is strategic, as Station 7 is located one mile from the airport.

Jet fuel burns hotter than diesel, and it is considered a high-energy-density liquid, meaning it contains more energy per unit of volume than most other fuels and requires a thicker foam blanket application in order to extinguish a fire. The foam starves the fuel of oxygen.

In addition to the foam on the truck, additional foam will also be stored at the airport. Pictured to the left: Montavious Harris.
